A table of contents with one line

- The anchors
- When there is no list
- The look

Put `toc: true` in the front matter of a page:

```
---
title: A long page toc: true
---
```

TileDown anchors the page's `h2` and `h3` headings and puts a list of links to them first. This page does it, so the list above this paragraph is built, not written.

The anchors

An anchor is the heading text in lowercase with hyphens. A repeated heading gets `-2`, `-3` and so on, so every link goes to its own heading.

When there is no list

A page with fewer than two such headings gets no list, and a page without `toc` is unchanged.

The look

The `editorial` theme styles the list. The other themes show a plain list.